ABSTRACT

This volume provides a comprehensive listing of dissertations on Japan and Korea that are available from University Microfilms International. The present bibliography incorporates many titles that normally would be overlooked because they do not relate directly to the Japanese home islands or to the Korean peninsula. Among the ones included, for example, are those which focus on other geographical areas of the world but nonetheless contain useful information about (a) the impact of Japanese culture upon Americans and Europeans, (b) Western academic programs for the study of Northeast Asia, and (c) Japanese and Korean relations with various Asian and Western countries in both historical and contemporary times. An expanding body of research on the Japanese and Korean communities in non-Asian lands also is brought together within certain sections of the bibliography. This volume emphasizes work undertaken in the social sciences and the humanities, but it lists a number of these completed in the natural sciences as well. All dissertations within the main listing are classified by subject on the basis of the content and their specific relation to Japan or Korea. Cross-references are provided where appropriate. There are three indexes: an alphabetical listing by author, an index by degree awarding institution, and a modified subject index limited primarily to geographical, literary, and personal names. Introduction

Higher degree programs at universities throughout the Western world have increasingly awarded doctoral degrees for research on Japan and on Korea. Between 1877 and 1969, approximately 2600 dissertations dealing in some way with these two countries were accepted by academic institutions in Australia, Europe and North America. Half again as many have been completed in just a few years since then. Doctoral Dissertations on Japan and Korea, 1969-1974 has been compiled specifically in response to this development and strives to meet two of the resulting information needs of individuals interested in Northeast Asia. First, it provides the basic bibliographical control for nearly all recent Western-language dissertations. The main listing contains entries for 1316 theses: 914 on Japan, 314 on Korea, and 88 on both Japan and Korea. The large majority of these represent research done in the United States, but more than 200 entries are included for work undertaken in twelve European countries (excluding the USSR) as well as Australia, Canada and India. In addition, there is an appendix of 108 theses defended before 1969, which serves as an addendum to the author's Japan and Korea: An Annotated Bibliography of Doctoral Dissertations in Western Languages, 1877-1969,[1] while a second appendix identifies 39 recently completed Soviet dissertations. Second, this volume provides a comprehensive listing of the dissertations on Japan and Korea that are available from University Microfilms International in Ann Arbor, Michigan and High Wycomb, England. As such, it serves as a convenient catalogue for individuals who wish to obtain a full text copy of a particular title or who need a citation to the dissertation's summary in Dissertation Abstracts International. The fact that seventy-three percent of the theses within the main bibliographical listing are available from University Microfilms International testifies to the important role which this publisher has come to play in disseminating the results of advanced research within the field of Asian Studies. Until a cumulative supplement to this volume can be published, the author's semiannual journal Doctoral Dissertations on Asia: An Annotated Bibliographical Journal of Current International Research[2] will try to keep the present reference work up to date.

As with its parent volume Japan and Korea, the present bibliography incorporates many titles that normally would be overlooked because they do not relate directly to the Japanese home islands or to the Korean peninsula. Among the ones included, for example, are those which focus on other geographical areas of the world but nonetheless contain useful information about (a) the impact of Japanese culture upon Americans and Europeans, (b) Western academic programs for the study of Northeast Asia, and (c) Japanese and Korean relations with various Asian and Western countries in both historical and contemporary times. An expanding body of research on the Japanese and Korean communities in non-Asian lands also is brought together within certain sections of the bibliography. This volume emphasizes work undertaken in the social sciences and the humanities, but it lists a number of theses completed in the natural sciences as well. The selection of all bibliographical items is based strictly on their relevance to the study of Japan and Korea, not on their intrinsic value or merit. No attempt has been made to assess the quality of the research listed.

All dissertations within the main listing are classified along subject lines on the basis of their content and their specific relation to Japan or Korea. To a considerable extent, dissertations within the social sciences concerning events prior to 1945 are entered under "History". Cross-references, or introductory notes advising the reader to consult related sections as well as specific entries elsewhere in the bibliography, are provided wherever appropriate. Individuals approaching the bibliography by subject only are urged to make full use of these notes, to search under related topics, and to consult the various appendixes. Within each subsection of the main listing, the arrangement is chronological according to the year of the dissertation's completion or formal acceptance, rather than alphabetical by author. Particularly when used in conjunction with the information provided by Japan and Korea, this approach will enable the interested reader to discern long-term trends in various types of doctoral research. The first statistical table (page 63) shows the distribution of dissertations by the country in which they were written and by their calendar year of completion; the second indicates the distribution of American dissertations by degree-awarding institutions during the period covered. The three indexes–(a) an alphabetical listing by author, (b) an index by degree-awarding institution, and (c) a modified subject index limited primarily to geographical, literary and personal names–should also be consulted.

The information furnished for each dissertation entry appears in the following sequence: (1) the consecutive entry number; (2) the author's name in full; (3) the complete title and subtitle of the dissertation (with an English translation or approximate meaning for foreign-language titles); (4) the name of the degree-awarding university or institution; (5) the calendar year in which the author received his/her degree or, when unknown, the year in which his/her dissertation was completed and defended; (6) the type of degree awarded and the name either of the academic department/school for which the thesis was written or the author's field of specialization (this usually is expressed as "Ph.D. in X," "Ed.D. in Y," "Doctorat de 3^{e} cycle en X," "Dr., Y Facultät," etc.); (7) the number of pages in the dissertation as noted in Dissertation Abstracts International or the pagination of the actual typescript (whichever is most readily available); (8) the Dissertation Abstracts International (DAI)[3] volume, issue and page numbers citing the location of a readily available abstract whenever applicable; (9) the University Microfilms International order number ("Order No.") where appropriate, or a statement explaining how to obtain a copy of the dissertation from some other source; and (10) a brief annotation whenever the title of a dissertation fails to indicate its relevance to the entire bibliography or its appropriateness for inclusion within the subsection in which it is classified.

In compiling any bibliography of this nature, the author must impose continually upon the cooperation, goodwill and patience of his colleagues and associates. Many individuals, among them university reference librarians, recent doctoral degree recipients and personal friends, have contributed to this volume. Especially noteworthy assistance has been received from: The Association for Asian Studies, Inc. (Ann Arbor, Michigan), which permitted the author to make full use of the bibliographical information which he initially compiled for publication in his ongoing column of doctoral research that has appeared since 1969 in various AAS publications; Enid Bishop (Australian National University Library) and Barry C. Bloomfield (SOAS Library, University of London), themselves the authors of important bibliographies dealing with graduate level research about Asia; Bonnie Davis and Gloria Worrell (University Microfilms International), who cheerfully and patiently worked with the author at many stages of this undertaking; Harley Holden (Harvard University Archives), who not only assisted the author in his work at the Archives over the years but also answered numerous inquiries for information; Dorothy Johnson (University Microfilms International), who prepared the final cover design for this bibliography incorporating selected photographs from the author's personal collection; Yasuto Kaihara (University of Hawaii Library) and Karen Nakano (Kaneohe, Hawaii), who helped complete the entries for Hawaii theses; Harald Kleinschmidt (Göttingen, West Germany), who called to the author's attention many of the German dissertations listed within the first appendix; Girja Kumar (Jawaharlal Nehru University Library, New Delhi); Mikolaj Melanowicz (University of Warsaw); Patricia Polansky (University of Hawaii Library), who provided the bibliographical information on which the appendix of recently completed Soviet dissertations is based; Michel Popoff (Bibliothèque de la Sorbonne, Paris) and Mlle. E. Dartiguenave (Centre de Documentation Sciences Humaines, C.N.R.S., Paris), who greatly facilitated the author's efforts to cover French doctoral research; the entire staff of The University of Michigan's Harlan Hatcher Library (especially the Reference Service), who helped in many more ways than any of its members realized; Margaret Yamashita (Ann Arbor, Michigan), who voluntarily contributed her time at a crucial stage; and Jung-Suk Youn (The University of Michigan), who prepared the calligraphy for the cover design and assisted in many additional ways. The Center for Japanese Studies at The University of Michigan (Robert Cole, Director; Elsie Orb, Administrative Assistant) provided the office space for preparing the entire volume and helped cover the postal and photo copying expenses. Choi Ick-Hwan, Naomi Fukuda and Harry R. Wilkinson, to whom the bibliography is dedicated, have provided continued encouragement and inspiration over the years. To all of these individuals and institutions, the author expresses his most sincere appreciation. This bibliography could not have been compiled in its present form without their help.

In an undertaking of this kind, every effort has been made to insure that the information presented is as comprehensive and as accurate as possible. Inevitably, however, there are bound to be omissions in certain cases and errors in others. Corrections and additions always will be very welcome. Furthermore, if supplements to the present work and to this bibliography's companion volumes dealing with China, Southeast Asia, and South Asia[4] are to be complete and authoritative, if all of them are to list pertinent works that may have been omitted unknowingly in the author's previous bibliographies, and if the bibliographical journal Doctoral Dissertations on Asia is to offer up-to-date coverage of relevant thesis research, then it is essential that students, faculty members and institutional centers everywhere take the initiative of bringing this information to the author's attention. Whenever possible, the information contributed for inclusion should consist of the following:

FOR COMPLETED DISSERTATIONS:
Author's full name, permanent mailing address, dissertation title and subtitle (for foreign-language dissertations, the original title and an English translation), university and department to which the thesis was submitted, type of doctoral degree received and calendar year awarded, complete pagination of the dissertation typescript, a 50-75 word long descriptive annotation of the dissertation's scope, objective or major conclusion, and a statement indicating how copies of the thesis may be obtained.

FOR DISSERTATIONS IN PROGRESS (for inclusion in the journal Doctoral Dissertations on Asia only):
Author's full name, permanent mailing address, dissertation topic or tentative title, university and department to which the thesis will be submitted, anticipated date of completion, and a 50-75 word long descriptive annotation of the dissertation's projected scope or objective.

All contributions will be acknowledged whenever possible and should be sent directly to:

[3] Known as Dissertation Abstracts before July 1969 and as Microfilm Abstracts from 1938 through 1951, this monthly periodical contains over thirty thousand 600-word summaries each year of recently completed dissertations. DAI is compiled and edited by University Microfilms International and is currently published in two sections: Humanities (A) and Sciences (B). The A and B sections are paginated separately and may be identified by the letters A or B following the page number. A list of the institutions which regularly make their dissertations available through University Microfilms International appears in each issue of that journal. DAI is a major reference work now found in most North American college and university libraries and in many academic institutions elsewhere throughout the world.

The only comprehensive reference to energy-related doctoral dissertations

If you work in energy-related industry or research; if you study or set energy policy; if you teach, manage or plan the use of energy resources; or if you're a librarian who receives inquiries about energy information… you won't want to be without this all-new reference book. University Microfilms International searched its extensive data base of over a half-million dissertation citations to compile this comprehensive index—the only one of its kind. The more than 5,000 citations selected for inclusion are arranged using a key-phrase system. This system lets the researcher turn immediately to closely-defined units of information. Each entry in the index also identifies the location of an abstract and provides ordering information for full text copies of each dissertation; most may be ordered directly from University Microfilms.

Price is $66.00 per copy (includes shipping and handling).
(Price outside U.S. is $75.00 plus shipping and handling.)

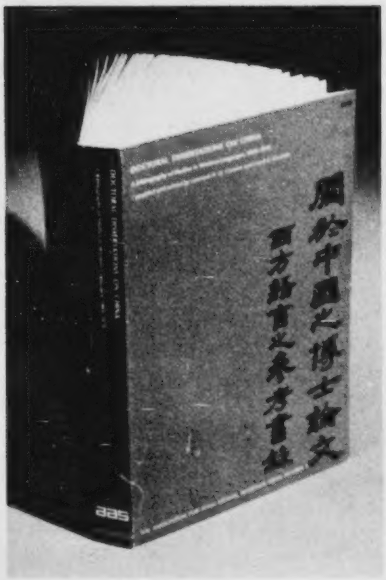
Doctoral Dissertations on China:
A Bibliography of Studies in Western Languages,
1945-1970

BY LEONARD H.D. GORDON AND FRANK JOSEPH SHULMAN



This volume lists 2217 dissertations submitted to universities in 23 countries which deal with China, Mongolia, Tibet, and the overseas Chinese communities. In addition to the authors' names, the complete title and subtitle of each dissertation, and the names of the institutions to which the theses were submitted, the bibliography notes the inclusion of relevant abstracts published in Dissertation Abstracts and provides information on how to obtain copies of the dissertation typescripts. The entire listing is supplemented by three extensive author, institutional and subject indexes.

"The number of [dissertation] titles listed (most of which have never been published) is a sufficient indicator of the need for such a work. It is fortunate that it has now appeared and that it has been compiled with such care." -- China Quarterly

". . . deserves to be included in numerous public library collections and in the private holdings of China specialists, for whom it will represent an indispensable tool."
-- Lucien Bianco, Bulletin des bibliothèques de France

". . . should prove of inestimable value in charting the future course of Chinese studies." -- Irene Eber, Monumenta Serica

Japan and Korea:

An Annotated Bibliography of Doctoral Dissertations in Western Languages, 1877-1969 COMPILED AND EDITED BY FRANK JOSEPH SHULMAN

Japan and Korea

This work brings together in classified order 2586 dissertations, accepted by universities in 26 countries and written in 14 Western languages, that deal in whole or in part with Japan and Korea respectively. The bibliography annotates each entry extensively; notes the source of an abstract, if any, in such journals as Dissertation Abstracts; indicates the availability of dissertation copies from University Microfilms International; and lists related published works, both books and articles, by the dissertation authors. There are author, institutional and brief subject indexes for easy reference.

"One would not expect an annotated list of doctoral dissertations to make particularly fascinating reading, but those users of Mr. Shulman's compilation who are serious students of East Asian Studies will find it a hard book to put down."
— Hillary Conroy, Monumenta Nipponica

". . . part of a new system offering an attempt at comprehensiveness, not only for the United States output of dissertations, but for the entire Western-language world output."
— G. Raymond Nunn, Journal of Asian Studies

"An invaluable bibliographical tool."

DOCTORAL DISSERTATIONS COMPLETED BEFORE 1969

The following 111 dissertations were accepted by institutions of higher learning around the world before 1969. Comprehensive bibliographical information about them was received too late to permit their inclusion in the predecessor to this volume: Japan and Korea: An Annotated Bibliography of Doctoral Dissertations in Western Languages, 1877-1969 (Chicago: American Library Association, 1970). The entries are divided into three categories of doctoral research: (A) on Japan, (B) on Japan as well as Korea, and (C) on Korea alone. Within each listing the entries appear in chronological order by year of completion. Cross-references to all of these dissertations may be found throughout this bibliography.

MODIFIED SUBJECT INDEX

This index is limited primarily to geographical, literary, and personal names appearing within the titles of the dissertations and in the accompanying annotations whenever they exist. Included are Westerners and Chinese who have had some contact with Japan or Korea, or who have been influenced in some way by Japanese culture. The names of Japanese and Korean cities and villages, moreover, usually appear twice: as main entries, and as sub-entries under the prefectures (or provinces) in which they are located. All numbers refer to entry numbers.

Dissertation

special subject bibliographies

catalogs of doctoral research on various topical issues

To bring together certain large groups of dissertations, we periodically undertake the preparation of dissertation catalogs on subjects of topical significance. Normally comprised of several hundred titles from a number of academic disciplines, each catalog is intended to simplify and support research efforts in that particular area of concern.

In these listings, entries supply the dissertation title, author, degree, institution, year, order number, and in most cases the volume and page reference to the abstract in Dissertation Abstracts International.

We encourage you to write us for your free copy of any of the special subject catalogs we currently offer.
